Eight Things Foster Parents Wish Every Child Advocate Knew
Case Managers

- Need Additional Training
- Good Performance
- Great

- 90% of Population
Foster Parents

- Need Additional Training
- Good Performance
- Great

5% of Population

90% of Population
We’re On Your Side

“We are on your side. We want to assist to make your job easier. In order to do this we want to be respected and valued partners on the child’s team.

Please don’t treat us like paid babysitters or assume that we don’t want or need to attend court and the permanency staffings. We want to be involved. We are an important part of the system of care.”
“Please be sensitive about our feelings when you ask us if we would be open to adopting our foster child. This is a life-long, important and very emotional decision.

Don’t assume that we can no longer be objective about the case if we say “yes” and don’t judge us negatively if we say “no”.

…And for goodness sake, please don’t ask this question in the presence of our foster child.”
“I know lazy foster parents are out there, but I’m not one of those bad foster parents who won’t take my foster child to their annual medical or semi-annual dental visits.

Please do not schedule medical and dental appointments for me and then inform me of when I need to be there. I would prefer to schedule these appointments myself because I know what my work and personal schedule is.”
“We are empathetic to the fact that your case load is very heavy and you have a lot of children to see, and we’re willing to be flexible. But please don’t use this as a reason for why you did not return our call, show up on time for scheduled meetings or tell us about staffings.

Please understand that we are also busy parents with full time jobs and other responsibilities. We’re willing to work with you in any way that makes your job easier, but please respect our time as well.”
"Please call me as soon as you know that the parent cancelled the visit or the staffing time has changed.

When you call me after I have left the house (but you knew 4 hours earlier) it really bothers me.

Most importantly, it disappoints my foster daughter. It would have been easier to give her the news about the cancelled visit if we had a little more notice"
“I know that you have a right to tour my entire house including my master bedroom. But please ask politely, and don’t demand, if you want to tour our home.

It is often not what you say that bothers us, but how you say it.

Try to remember that this is our family home, not a bed and breakfast.”
#7 Unannounced Visits

We understand that the requirement is for you to conduct quarterly unannounced visits. But please don’t make every visit an unannounced visit.

If you do an unannounced visit, please don’t get mad at me if I am on my way out the door for an appointment. Also, please don’t threaten to report me because I cannot stay to accommodate your unplanned and unscheduled visit.
“Please report bad foster parents. We don’t want them around either. They make us all look bad and we really do care about all the kids in foster care, not just the ones in our home.”
Thank you!

~Broward & Palm Beach Foster Parents